Inspector of fatal building collapse site found dead

Seventh death. L&I Inspector Ronald Wagenhoffer, 52, was found dead Wednesday night in an apparent suicide.

Department of Licenses and Inspections construction plan review specialist Ronald Wagenhoffer, 52, died shortly after 9 p.m. Wednesday from what appears to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound, city officials announced Thursday.

Wagenhoffer was found in his car parked on the 100 block of Shawmont Avenue in Roxborough.

A 16-year veteran of city government, Wagenhoffer performed the initial inspection of a Center City demolition site that last week partially collapsed onto a neighboring Salvation Army thrift store, killing six people and injuring 14 more.

"I want everybody to understand that there's a lot of hurt and pain associated with the tragedy that occurred on June 5, 2013," Licenses and Inspections Commissioner Carlton Williams said.

"We take that pain home with us at night and we wake up to it each and every day. We strive to protect our citizens by enforcing the building codes, and that's what Ron did. He worked extremely hard prior to that tragedy and he worked hard after the tragedy. He was a dedicated civil servant — he loved his job."

Ronald Wagenhoffer
FACEBOOK

Wagenhoffer's behavior following the collapse didn't outwardly raise red flags, according to officials. "Everybody knew that he had taken it hard," Deputy Mayor Everett Gillison said. "But the way that he was doing his job, he was handling it the way they thought he would be handling it, which was to work even harder."

Quoted

"There were individuals in the department who were reaching out to him ... who wanted to come and check in with him and see how he was doing. He just kept going and kept doing what he was doing, what he loved." Gillison

Gillison said Wagenhoffer did not face allegations of wrongdoing in any of the five investigations currently under way into the fatal collapse.

"I will state — right here, right now — this man did nothing wrong," he said. "The department did what it was supposed to do under the code that existed at the time, and we are proud of this department and its employees — period."

Hearing

Council to review vacant schools

City Councilwoman Blondell Reynolds Brown on Thursday introduced legislation calling for hearings on how to best repurpose vacant school buildings, citing a University of Pennsylvania School of Design study that revealed 75 percent of the schools slated to close this year are in weak or transitional real estate markets.

"Our goal is to harness the creativity and brain power from a host of diverse stakeholders to breathe new life into these buildings," Brown said in a statement.

Tragedy. NASCAR driver dies in crash at New Jersey speedway

NASCAR driver Jason Leffler died from injuries sustained in a crash at Bridgeport Speedway Wednesday night.

The fatal crash happened about 8:30 p.m. at the New Jersey speedway. The 37-year-old two-time NASCAR Nationwide Series winner was competing in a dirt car race at the Swedesboro, Gloucester County, complex.

"NASCAR extends its thoughts, prayers and deepest sympathies to the family of Jason Leffler who passed away earlier this evening," NASCAR said in statement Wednesday night.

"For more than a decade, Jason was a fierce competitor in our sport and he will be missed," they added.

Leffler lived in Long Beach, Calif. He went by the nickname "LefTurn."

$2 cigarette tax passes in City Council

Smoked. The tax still requires approval in the statehouse.

Smoke 'em if you got 'em.

City Council approved a $2 tax hike on cigarettes Thursday to help fill the $304 million hole in the School District of Philadelphia's 2014 budget.

The tax, unanimously approved by City Council and championed by Mayor Michael Nutter, will still however require state approval.

If approved, smokers would first see the price increase on Jan. 1, 2014. The hike is expected to generate $45 million. Cigarettes are not included in the city's current tobacco tax.

Nutter's other revenue-generating idea, the liquor-by-the-drink tax increase from 10 percent to 15 percent, has not made the same headway in Council chambers. That increase, which would also require state approval, is expected to generate $22 million.

The city expects both the cigarette and liquor-by-the drink taxes, along with plans for improved tax collections, to raise an estimated $95 million for schools.

Councilwoman Maria Quinones-Sanchez said her alternate plan, which would raise businesses' use and occupancy tax, would raise $30 million.

That bill is scheduled to be voted on at the next council session.

City Council approves rate for residents under AVI

Get your calculator out — the tax rate is set.

On Thursday, City Council approved a 1.34 percent property tax rate under the Actual Value Initiative. AVI, for short, is the new tax system that is based on true market value rather than a predefined percentage.

Council also approved the continuation of the homestead exemption, which reduces a home's taxable assessed value by $30,000.

Darrell Clarke, City Council president, also set forth an amendment that would allow long-time homeowners in gentrified areas to receive tax relief under AVI.

"Longtime owner-occupants of principal residences throughout the City face the real threat of losing the financial ability to remain in their homes by virtue of the rising market values and consequent property tax assessments which are the hallmarks of a gentrifying neighborhood," according to the bill.

Indicted. Philly man charged in 'secret shopper' scheme

David Brister, 56, was arrested Thursday for allegedly teaming up with at least one overseas co-conspirator to defraud dozens of Americans in a series of Internet scams.

Federal authorities said in one scheme, Brister posted Craiglist advertisements for fake jobs such as secret shoppers. Upon "hiring" an employee, Brister and his co-conspirator would allegedly send the person counterfeit checks or money orders and instruct them to keep a portion of their "salary" while wiring the rest of the money to Brister.

Brister faces charges of conspiracy, mail and wire fraud and transmitting counterfeit money orders and checks.

If you go

Gary Papa Run

8 a.m., Father's Day (Sunday)

Popular Philadelphia newscaster Gary Papa lost his battle with prostate cancer in 2009, but his legacy lives on each Father's Day with an annual 5K run/walk.

Delaware County's Jim Miller was lucky enough to survive his bout with prostate cancer, but likes reconnecting with survivors at the walk each year.

"When something impacts you personally," Miller, 57, said, "you become aware. You find time to participate."

When Miller turned 40, he got his prostate checked often. That cancer ran on his father's side. Around Miller's 51st birthday, his doctor found something. It was cancer.

Quoted

"He was in there so long, I thought he was going to buy me flowers."

Miller joked about his prostate exam

After doing research, Miller decided to work with Dr. Patrick Walsh on cutting-edge technology at Johns Hopkins.

In 2007, Miller's prostate was removed with robotic surgery. Miller admitted he does have some "bedroom issues" but added, "I'm cancer-free. You look at it in different ways."

About six years ago, Miller started to participate in the Prostate Health International's Gary Papa Run, now in its 11th year.

"My family has all participated," he said. "I've got some friends to come with me. It's an event to go out and throw some money down and get together."

Survey. Gays report more acceptance, but room for progress

The majority of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender adults say society has become more accepting of them in the past decade, according to a poll billed as the first-ever major survey of its kind in America.

However, although 92 percent of those asked saw progress, many said bias remained common, according to the Pew Research Center's report.

Two in 10 people said they have been treated unfairly by an employer because of their sexual orientation or gender identity, and three in 10 say they have been physically attacked or threatened. While six in 10 said there was some acceptance, two in 10 said there was a lot of social acceptance. Two in 10 said there was "no acceptance." REUTERS

Mueller says US will hold Snowden responsible on leak

Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Robert Mueller testifies during a hearing before the House Judiciary Committee Thursday on Capitol Hill. / GETTY IMAGES

Hearing. The FBI director says Snowden harmed national security when he divulged the secrets.

FBI Director Robert Mueller said on Thursday that the U.S. government is doing everything it can to hold confessed leaker Edward Snowden accountable for splashing surveillance secrets across the pages of newspapers worldwide.

"As to the individual who has admitted making these disclosures, he is the subject of an ongoing criminal investigation," Mueller said without naming Snowden.

Snowden is believed to be in Hong Kong after flying there last month from Hawaii, where he lived. He has said he plans to request asylum and that he divulged secrets to the Guardian and the Washington Post because he believed the surveillance programs were illegal and intrusive.

The U.S. Justice Department has opened a criminal investigation into the alleged disclosure of classified information. It has not revealed any charges or an extradition request.

Mueller added his voice to the Obama administration's defense of the surveillance programs, which he said comply in full with U.S. law and with basic rights guaranteed under the Constitution.

The information in a massive government database of daily telephone records has been instrumental in identifying people who sought to harm Americans, Mueller said.

The program collects "no content whatsoever" beyond data such as numbers called and the time and length of calls, he said. REUTERS

Chain. Microsoft to open Windows stores within Best Buy in US

Microsoft said it would open 500 special stores within existing Best Buy stores in the United States selling exclusively Windows-based tablets and computers and other Microsoft products in an effort to revitalize sales of its flagship operating system.

The world's largest software company, which already has a chain of 70 or so of its own Microsoft Stores and kiosks within shopping malls, said on Thursday the initiative would add more than 1,200 Best Buy Microsoft-trained sales associates to help customers.

Microsoft's new Windows 8 operating system has sold more than 100 million copies since its launch in October, but sales of new tablets and PCs running the software, and its own Surface tablet, have not been as strong as it hoped. An updated version called Windows 8.1 is scheduled for release later this year. REUTERS

Microsoft's plan comes just two months after Samsung Electronics also unveiled plans to install its brand shops in more than 1,400 Best Buy stores this year. / GETTY IMAGES

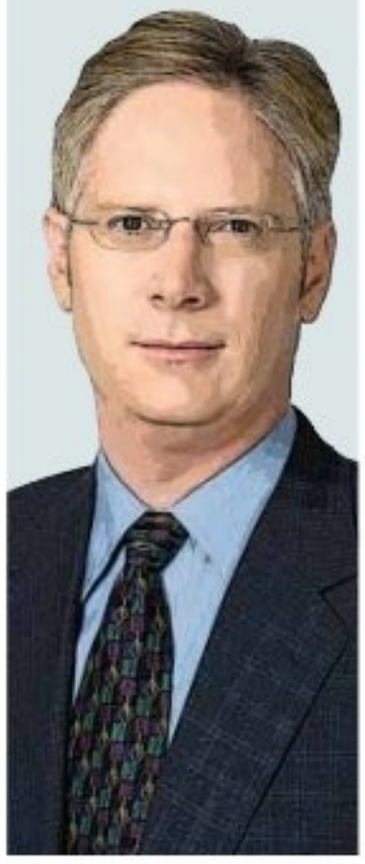
TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN



CNN=POLITICS

DULL AS DIRT

Intent on expanding my limited grasp of social media, I have stepped up the number of people I am following on Twitter. A week or so ago, I'd say the list was pretty much limited to my dentist and some woman in Arizona who collects porcelain owls. Now, I get regular updates on the activities of quarterback Drew Brees, actor Rainn Wilson and unfortunately the president of the United States.

Let me explain. Considering all the hoopla over Mr. Obama's proclivity for new media, I thought his tweets would be a torrent of 140-character brilliance. I expected gems like, "Note to Ag Dept: Plant soybeans on the National Mall. World hunger=solved!" Or maybe I could weigh in on difficult decisions, "Suspected terrorist spotted in Yemen. RT if I should launch the drones!" At very least, I thought I'd get some inside scoops.

Quoted

"It's just that he is the Leader of the Free World and his tweets are ... well, boring. Seriously, Bob Dole's are infinitely more amusing, and he's just hanging out in Kansas."

"Spilled coffee on the presidential slacks. Bummer." Or "I just bet Sebelius that Biden will be asleep before Cabinet meeting ends. LOL."

Instead, I've received a stream of political pabulum.

He tweets things like, "We can't miss this chance to fix our broken immigration system," and "We have a sense of energy and dynamism." There is nothing wrong with that. Of course he should promote his views, and heaven knows my tweets are often pretty weak. It's just that he is the Leader of the Free World and his tweets are…well, boring. Seriously, Bob Dole's are infinitely more amusing, and he's just hanging out in Kansas.

Maybe I'm missing some secret code. When Mr. Obama tweets, "The bill before the Senate isn't perfect," perhaps he actually means, "Hey, everyone who sees Rand Paul today, offer him some hair mousse!" But probably not.

My complaint is not about his politics. I'm agnostic on that. I'm just so disappointed with the lack of ideas, imagination, and inspiration, that I'm not sure I'll follow him much longer. Which, come to think of it, seems to be the problem he has with many Democrats these days.

Q&A

Teaming up

There's been a great deal of talk about plans for a Justice League movie. Do you feel a natural sense of competition with the Avengers, which is owned by rival company Marvel?

I mean, of course there's going to be a sense of competition because it's groups of superheroes coming together, of course there is. I don't like to think of it as competition. But people will naturally put the two together as competitors.

Eventually there has to be a World Cup of Superheroes.

Right. [Laughs]

So who would win?

OK. The difference between the Marvel heroes and the DC heroes is that DC heroes are godlike, all of them, where Marvel heroes, you might get one like Thor but otherwise they're very human. So in a head- to-head ... who knows?

You can take sides.

No, I'm not going to pick a side because I don't think it's fair because anything can happen. A plan never survives first contact. So ... yeah. But it would be very cool.

Q&A

What do you think audiences need from superheroes now?

"It's the same thing we've always needed, which is that sense of hope. There's always something going wrong in the world. It just shifts depending on the generation. And it's always nice to have that fantasy that there's someone who's going to fix everything. It's beating the odds, and that's been the same with mythological characters since the dawn of time, since we could think up gods — good gods and bad gods. Nothing has changed in the human psyche. We still need that."

HENRY CAVILL

The Man of Steel says that the modern superhero is more vulnerable and realistic: "We want to think that maybe our hero will lose, but then he wins."

THE NEW SUPERMAN

Iron Man gets the best jokes. Batman gets the best films. Wonder Woman gets the best plane (invisible!). And Hulk? Well, Hulk smash! But Superman started it all. Now 75 years old, the galaxy's most famous Kryptonian is back in "Man of Steel," a grounded take on the icon, directed by Zack "Watchmen" Snyder. In the film — an origin story — the young alien is scuttled to Earth, grows up, meets a girl (Amy Adams) and defends our planet from the evil General Zod (Michael Shannon).

READ THE REVIEW ON PAGE 21.

He also mopes around — a lot. In a tonal continuation of "The Dark Knight" series, our hero has feelings, and they add an extra dimension that the creators (including producer Christopher Nolan) hope to make the character less boring and more relevant.

Henry Cavill, a British actor best known for TV's "The Tudors," stars as the Man of Steel. We had to ask him why he's not so steely after all.

We've gone from square-jawed demigods to heroes that have to show vulnerability or a flaw. What do you think of that progression?

Well, when they were initially conceived, we needed them — desperately. We needed them to be strong-jawed superheroes — the classic hands-on-hips, nothing-can-touch-me, bullets bouncing off them [kind]. I mean, when Superman first came around, we were out of World War I and World War II was sort of creeping up. We needed those guys who could flit around the place and do wonderful things, and we could fantasize about all the world's problems being solved.

And now?

And now they've evolved into a more modern, more realistic thing to go with the times, so that the stories are still interesting. People these days don't find the immovable object interesting — the untouchable thing and the hero who will always win. We want to think that maybe our hero will lose, but then he wins. We must be able to associate with them. They've become less of a fantasy and more of an ideal to strive toward.

What has the Superman done to make him more relatable?

We've given him a very human essence. As much as he's not susceptible to the frailties of the human physical body, he's very much susceptible to the frailties of the human psyche. And that is what really makes us in touch with someone else, makes us go, "I know your pain" or, "Yeah, I've felt that happy before."

"The Dark Knight" director Christopher Nolan produced "Man of Steel" and has made the DC Comics world feel tethered to reality more than to cartoons.

It ties in very much with the evolution of the superhero. We need to see them in a real-world setting. It helps us to feel more and to be a part of the story. And that's important to me. I've never played this sort of, "OK, I'm going to talk [in a low, gravelly voice] all of a sudden." If I heard someone talking that way, I'd look at them funny and say, "Are you OK? Do you need to sit down?" Because they sound like a crazy person. I wanted to play him as a realistic being, just with these incredible powers, and that was up to CGI to fix for me. [Laughs]

- Essential reading. "The ones I like the most are 'Death of Superman,' 'The Return of Superman,' and 'Red Son,'" he says. "And I love some of the Superman/Batman ones. The particular one I read which stuck in my head was 'The Search for Kryptonite.' Batman is just getting peeved at Superman trying to be really helpful because he's got that super-strength and he can do things that Batman can't. But then at the finish of the book you see that Batman's got all the different kinds of kryptonite in a room, and you're going, 'Oh s—.' I just love the interaction between the two."

THE SUPERSENSITIVE SUPERHERO

Essay

CHRIS HARDWICK

CREATOR OF NERDIST

Chris Hardwick, creator of the Nerdist podcast and YouTube channel, tells us why Superman has to cry. As told to Ned Ehrbar.

We've definitely become more of a culture of wanting to identify with characters, rather than wanting to see characters that we couldn't be. It's not just movies and superheroes. When you look at protagonists in television, they're kind of crappy people. There's Don Draper or Dexter or Walter White. They're not one or the other — they're muddy.

What you see coming out now — after the era of '90s superhero movies — is sort of like the transition between glam rock and grunge, where you have the square-jawed heroes being phased out. They're kind of one-dimensional, there's not really much of an arc, they're just there to facilitate all of the action and just sort of be the opposing force to evil. But now people want to see more humanity, and I honestly think that has a lot to do with the Internet. The way we interact with the Internet, the way that we're all in each other's business with YouTube and vlogs, we're just used to seeing humans. And that's what we're identifying with, seeing other humans. People are bored by the one-dimensional, "Oh, he can do anything" hero because what's at stake then? What are they battling? We've seen so much of it up to this point that the one place that superheroes hadn't really gone, at least in film yet, is inward.

Superman: "I have so many feelings!" / WB

What works in "Man of Steel" is just the idea of taking the heroes off the pedestal and going, "They're still … if not humans, then creatures. Creatures with struggles." Because that's what people get wrapped up in, story and struggle and not just, "Oh, look, he's better than everyone else." It's the idea that he's not better than everyone. And Superman has a lot of struggles in the movie, more so than just, "Oh, he's got superpowers and he beats the crap out of those guys and it's all going to be fine because he's indestructible." People have seen that. You still want your healthy dose of action scenes, but then you want to identify with the characters.

Radioactive Man: The animal savior of Fukushima

When Fukushima's nuclear reactor exploded in 2011, all people living in the area were evacuated. All except rice farmer Naoto Matsumura, 53. Just 6 miles from the plant, the town had a population of 16,000. Now it is only Matsumura there, with 17 times the safe level of radiation. He shelters the region's wildlife, caring for everything from feral dogs to ostriches. He has the highest known level of radiation in Japan, which causes gradual cellular breakdown, but he may not feel the effects for 40 years.

Jetman: Leaping the Alps in a single bound

The Wright brothers may have been the ultimate aeronautical dreamers with the first airplane flight, but no one has come closer than Yves Rossy to making a human fly.

Rossy, aka Jetman, is a former fighter pilot who says he had always dreamed of being a bird since he first witnessed an air show as a 13-year-old. The inspiration drove him to invent and patent a series of jetpacks that would fire him through even more epic and courageous voyages.

From the first experiments in 2006, Rossy made his first public flight two years later, which took him over the Alps at speeds close to 200 miles per hour, at heights of 3,000 feet. The charismatic Swiss even found a moment to execute a 360-degree roll and later quipped, "That was to impress the girls."

This was followed by a 22-mile journey across the English Channel to France, which he completed in under 10 minutes, becoming the first man to make the distance with a jet pack. The feat was broadcast live across the world with great uncertainty surrounding the outcome as Rossy himself confessed his calculations were fallible.

Since then he has continued to break ground and world records for distance. In 2009, he performed the first intercontinental jet flight, and went on to fulfill a deeply held personal ambition to fly along the Grand Canyon. Not all of his missions have been successful, having crash-landed off the Spanish coast when the weather turned threatening. Rossy is devoted to spreading his message — pursue your dreams and "always have a Plan B." His TED talk remains one of the most downloaded, and he has also won praise for philanthropic efforts, such as performing shows for the benefit of disabled pilot school Aerobility. Rossy also hosts master classes for the next generation of jetpack pilots, which will surely produce the next great flying human.

Muscle Man: 'This is what I do for my country'

Egypt's economy suffered after the 2011 revolution that deposed President Hosni Mubarak, and Sayed Al-Essawy, now 27, took it upon himself to revive the nation's tourism industry with a fight to the death against a lion in front of the pyramids of Giza, proclaiming, "This is what I want to do for my country."

The self-styled "world's strongest man" had noble intentions but was met by criticism from animal rights groups and the Egyptian tourist board distanced itself. Nonetheless, Al-Essawy entered the arena with shield and sword and took on the lion, although the animal looked bored. Man defeated beast. The gladiator was subsequently arrested, yet supporters point to the re-opening of the pyramids and other major attractions after the fight as proof that Al-Essawy was a national hero.

A REAL-LIFE AVENGER

Mia Grace Montross, age 4, became famous on YouTube after her father quizzed her on comics. Here, we ask her to save the world.

MONTROSS AS BATGIRL, ALTHOUGH AT HEART, SHE'S A MARVEL GIRL

"Who's the God of Thunder?"
"Thor."
"Who's Thor's brother?"
"Loki."
"Where do they live?"
"Asgard."
"What is Captain America's shield made of?"
"Vibranium."

Did you answer any of those correctly? If not, you'd lose in a trivia contest to Mia Grace Montross, age 4. When her father, Skip, editor of DaddyDadBlog.com, quizzed her on insanely difficult Marvel trivia during a car ride, the video went viral.

"Between 'The Super Hero Squad Show' and the comics I read her, she's just a comic freak," her dad says. "She loves her comic books." We wondered if all that training would pay off, so we put forth some real-world scenarios to see how she'd solve them.

First of all, why do you love superheroes so much?
Because I like them, and they save the day.

Who is your favorite?
I like Ms. Marvel, and Scarlet Witch because Scarlet Witch can shoot stuff out of her hands. Ms. Marvel because of her yellow hair, like mine.

If you were a superhero, what would your name be? What special powers would you have?
Wanda. Shooting stuff from my hands.

OK, let's talk through some situations. A short bad guy has access to a lot of weapons and keeps threatening to blow up the world. What would you do to save the world?
I would destroy the villains.

A lot of the world has food but some countries don't, and they are starving and hungry. How would you feed people?
I would shoot food out of my hands.

Some people like to take a special medicine that makes them feel really good, but other people say the medicine is bad because it turns people into monsters. With your super intelligence, who would you say is more right?
Superheroes are right. Medicine is good.

There's this special energy source that can provide everyone in the world with power, but it's very rare. How would you use your super powers to make sure everyone has access to the energy source?
I would just defeat the villains. In January, I'm going to turn 5.

Some people are getting sick because an alien virus is attacking them. How would you use your powers to cure them?
I would defeat the aliens and give them chicken soup.

OK, last one: It's very important that everyone gets treated with kindness and respect, no matter who they are. How would you use your super powers to make sure that everyone gets treated equally?
They have to share. I would just tell them they have to share.

Unleashing one's own Superman

What do you get for the superhero who has everything? Scott Snyder decided to celebrate Superman's diamond anniversary by writing "the kind of story I would tell if I got just one chance to tell a Superman story."

The result is "Superman Unchained," a new series that pits the Man of Steel against a new adversary while reprising many of the characters and places that have been integral to the red-caped icon since his 1938 debut in "Action Comics #1."

"I wanted it to feel both classic and fresh at the same time," Snyder says. "So you'll see all the things that you love about the Superman mythology, but there will be elements that really shake it up."

Snyder, who has received acclaim for his work on Batman comics in recent years, calls writing for Superman "intimidating." The first issue, featuring art by DC Comics co-publisher Jim Lee, hit stands on Wednesday, the same day as Snyder's latest Batman effort, and coincides with a number of other 75th birthday celebrations — not least of which is the release of the new movie, "Man of Steel."

In addition, a new video game and a new online game are being released this year, as well as a new animated movie. In New York, Midtown Comics is celebrating this week with a sale and a bit of Superman swag.

"It's hugely exciting and a very big honor to be part of a tide of excitement this year that's about putting Superman back in the spotlight," Snyder says. "I think even though he's the first and in a lot of ways the greatest superhero, people sometimes take him for granted because he's been there for so long."

Staying power

Snyder says that he feels Superman has managed to persist in the popular imagination for three-quarters of a century because, "He always stands up for what's right. I think there's always a place and a relevance for that. At the core, I think what's made him appealing over all these years is that he represents the best of us. He might be an alien, but he's the most deeply human character in all of comics."

Here's the cover of Scott Snyder's new run of Superman comics.

Aerial dancers will swing beneath Strawberry Mansion Bridge.

Alie Vidich wants you to swim in the Schuylkill

Dance. The choreographer is putting on a show on the water.

Seen from the proper vantage point, the Schuylkill River can be one of Philadelphia's loveliest, most bucolic settings. But as choreographer Alie Vidich points out, the banks along Kelly Drive aren't always the best place to take in that view. "There's always a sense of being rushed," she says, "with all the joggers and runners along Kelly Drive. Even the river itself often has a frenetic pace because of all the boating activity."

On the next two Sundays, Vidich hopes to change people's perspective on the Schuylkill and their relationship with it in "Invisible River," the latest performance piece by her dance theater company, Alie & The Brigade. The piece will greet visitors with a carnival of colorful animal sculptures created by artists from SpArc Philadelphia, a program for people with cognitive, intellectual and developmental disabilities. An ensemble of nine singing dancers will perform composer Elliott Harvey's choral compositions while, in the distance, a pair of aerial dancers swing beneath Strawberry Mansion Bridge.

"We want to slow down the sense of time that you naturally feel when you're in that area," Vidich says. "Even though the piece is spectacle, it doesn't have a quickness to it. We're trying to create an environment that asks whether this frenetic pace that we constantly operate on reflects back on how we look at the environment around us."

Two rivers

But will you float?

This is not the first time Vidich has ventured out onto the Schuylkill. In 2010 and 2011, she explored local history in works that took audience members into the water on canoe journeys. While viewers will stay on dry ground for this piece, Vidich still hopes to awaken awareness of the river and to advocate for swimming access to its waters. "I look at the rivers that are on both sides of our city," she says. "We have so few recreational opportunities that aren't walking, jogging or running, and boating is a very expensive sport for people to partake in. So for me, this is about psychologically reconnecting to your environment."

Kanye's universe

Timeline. We're just lucky enough to live in it. On the eve of his new album, "Yeezus," we look at the rapper's awesome awesomeness.

Collaborators

"Entourage," 2007 – In one episode, Kanye saved the day when he offered to take Vinny Chase and co. to Cannes on his private plane.

Takashi Murakami, 2007 – The poppy Japanese artist designed the "Graduation" cover and directed the video for "Good Morning."

Daft Punk, 2007/2013 – He sampled the French duo's "Harder, Better, Faster, Stronger" on "Stronger," and they helped out with three or four "joints" (as Kanye put it) on "Yeezus."

DAFT PUNK

Bon Iver, 2010/2013 – Two tracks from "My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy" — "Woods" and "Monster" — featured the folk artist's efforts. They work together again on "Yeezus."

"The Cleveland Show," 2010 – Kanye stars as Kenny West, Cleveland Jr.'s rival, on the "Family Guy" spinoff. He's reprised his role in four additional episodes since.

SKRILLEX

Skrillex, 2013 – Kanye and the dubstep king confirmed they collaborated on a track for "Yeezus."

Lovers

Alexis Phifer, 2002 to 2008 – Kanye proposed to the designer in 2006, but they never married.

Brooke Crittendon, 2004 – While taking a break from Phifer, Kanye dated the "Harlem Heights" star.

Amber Rose, 2008 to 2010 – It put the model into the limelight. She's now engaged to Wiz Khalifa.

Melody Thornton, 2010 – Kanye was seen holding hands and attending red carpet events with the former Pussycat Doll.

Selita Ebanks, 2010 – After the Victoria's Secret model starred in his "Runaway" video, the two reportedly got together.

KIM KARDASHIAN, 2012 TO PRESENT – WEST IS EXPECTING HIS FIRST CHILD WITH THE REALITY TV STAR, WHO ALSO INSPIRED TRACKS LIKE "COLD."

Jay-Z, 2000 to present – A true bromance. The two superstar rappers have worked together forever, and toured with "Watch the Throne." Why? "I needed to connect with Jay," Kanye told the New York Times this week.

EBANKS

Controversies

Kanye vs. AIDS, 2005 – During a Live 8 tour, Kanye announces that AIDS was a "man-made disease ... placed in Africa just like crack was placed in the black community to break up the Black Panthers."

Kanye vs. Bush, 2005 – "George Bush doesn't care about black people," Kanye announced during a benefit for Hurricane Katrina, broadcast to millions. Bush called it "one of the most disgusting moments."

Kanye as Jesus, 2006 – One-upping John Lennon, Yeezy poses as Jesus for the cover of Rolling Stone.

Kanye on "South Park," 2009 – Fueled by his massive ego, a cartoon "Kanye" goes into a murderous rage after not getting a joke. "It hurts my feelings," he wrote on his blog, "but what can you expect."

Kanye vs. Taylor Swift, 2009 – West would apologize to Swift for interrupting her MTV award win, but took back the apology just this week.

Obama vs. Kanye, 2009/2012 – After his MTV antics, the president called West a "jackass" — twice. "I don't give a f— what the President's got to say," Kanye rapped.

Kanye as Hitler, 2011 – Kanye says that people look at him as if he's Hitler, during a British concert. The crowd boos.

Lifestyle

Fatburger, 2008 – Kanye opened up a branch of the chain in his hometown of Chicago, but it closed down in February 2011.

Donda West Plastic Surgery Law, 2009 – California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger signed a law requiring people to undergo a physical examination before undergoing plastic surgery, after Kanye's mother died during a cosmetic procedure.

Louis Vuitton X Kanye West, 2009 – The rapper released three styles of high-top sneakers — Don's, Jasper's and Mr. Hudson's — and announced his intent to change his name to Martin Louis the King Jr.

Nike Air Yeezy, 2009, 2012 – The rapper was the first nonathlete to work with the brand, and has released two editions to date.

DW Kanye West, 2011 – Kanye debuted the first collection from his fashion line, which was named after his deceased mother, during Paris Fashion Week. It garnered lackluster reviews, but now he's on the map.

Met Ball, 2013 – Yeezy was put on Vogue's Best Dressed at the Met Ball list — but they cropped out his date, the floral-couch-wearing Kim Kardashian.

Needs a better ending

Apocalypse comedy. The Apatow boys try to reinvigorate their brand.

James Franco, Jonah Hill, Craig Robinson and the rest try to survive the apocalypse in "This is the End." / SUZANNE HANOVER

With "Pineapple Express," screenwriters/bros Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg hit upon an inspired, if counterintuitive pairing: An action film, a genre that requires agency and invention, populated by stoner slackers. So what if the actual plot wasn't that creative? Stars Rogen and James Franco, reared by Judd Apatow to be inspired ad-libbers, could riff their way out of any narrative dead-ends.

The same notion applies to "This is the End," in which most of today's comedy scene, playing themselves, go to a party at James Franco's "Scarface"-ian manse — only to get gorily dispatched by what turns out to be the Christian rapture. All that's left are Rogen, Franco, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, Craig Robinson and Danny McBride, cowering inside Franco's house while fire and demons rage outside. They have little to do but riff on their personas. Franco gets gay rumor jokes. Oscar-nominee Hill, with diamond stud, is all Hollywood positivity (and apparently sincere, which makes him more hilariously grating). McBride somehow proves more evil and twisted than "Eastbound & Down"'s Kenny Powers.

The Apatow name has stumbled a bit since it crashed unexpectedly into the mainstream. "This is the End" plays in part as a re-establishing of the brand, with the stars all (or mostly all) coming together. They can still banter, one-upping each other into left-field one-liners. Meanwhile, cokehead Michael Cera gets impaled on a street pole far too quickly. (Don't worry: He reprises the obnoxious jerk routine in two forthcoming no-budget Argentine art-comedies.)

It's almost a shame it gets whittled down to its two writers' sensibilities. All that Rogen and Goldberg stand-in Baruchel want to do is smoke weed, eat burgers and stare at the former's 3-D television. As the more ambitious, or at least funnier, characters get picked off, all we're left with are these modest aspirations, and it becomes a liability. Surely writers who toked less would come up with an ending that's truly, awe-inspiringly, awesomely insane, rather than the fanboy anticlimax that results. Perhaps they should switch to acid.

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's a mixed bag!

Superhero saga. Superman almost returns in this noisy, mindless new reboot.

Amy Adams' Lois Lane is really into Henry Cavill's Superman in "Man of Steel." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Today's comic book movies are self-serious to a fault, and for that you can blame the first Christopher Reeve "Superman" from 1978. Frivolous junk for pre-adolescent boys (and the nostalgic adults they would become) was suddenly treated like grandiose American myth, complete with a sleepy Marlon Brando, top-billed and extravagantly paid, as Superman's dad. "Superman Returns" tried to ape this style, and its failure — it "only" made $400 million — sent producers to start from scratch. A lot of what they came up with is roughly the same as before, but still succumbs to many of today's blockbuster annoyances.

Like the '78 "Superman," it opens with the death of Krypton and the punishment of mutinous fascist General Zod (Michael Shannon!). Here, Zod gets to kill Jor-El (a regal Russell Crowe), but not before the latter sends his son to an uncertain future on Earth. Zod eventually re-enters the picture, demanding humanity hand over the now-adult flying humanoid (Henry Cavill) or else. (It's just like "The Purge!") Kal-El/Clark Kent/Superman, now a brooding drifter yet to take up journalism, has to decide whether to comply or fight.

He doesn't have much deciding to do. Though shepherded by Christopher Nolan, this is surprisingly light on thought. A heavy first half, which regulates snippets of S-Man's youth to Nolan-style flashbacks, makes way for a solid hour of bombast, smackdowns and widespread destruction. Those who enjoyed major cities being leveled — with presumably thousands of off-screen deaths — in "Transformers 3" and "The Avengers" will get a kick out of Metropolis receiving even worse treatment. At least it's equal opportunity: The fight between our hero and Zod's minions begins with a thrashing of Smallville's 7-Elevens and IHOPs.

The brute force, brought by a relatively tempered Zack Snyder ("300") is impressive, at least at first: When the belligerent Kryptonians start wreaking havoc, things feel genuinely dangerous. These scenes, alas, subscribe to what could be dubbed J.J. Abrams syndrome. As in his "Star Trek" pictures, thoughtful problem solving is replaced by mindless action. When Superman has to overpower a spaceship, there's no strategy and no real doubt that it will all work out.

Overqualified actors make up for lots. Cavill, who never has to play nerdish Clark (not yet, anyway), is a fine Superman, imposing but wry. Though Shannon's Zod is no Terrence Stamp in "Superman II," he's hammy fun, while Amy Adams' Lois Lane is nearly as plucky and flirty as Margot Kidder. But like most of today's blockbusters, it's a mixed bag of promise and disappointment, a picture hobbled by aural and visual noise.

An Orthodox love story (sort of)

Religious drama. Rama Burshtein's debut delves into romance among Tel Aviv's devout.

Yiftach Klein plays an Orthodox widower in "Fill the Void."
SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Religious films have acquired a bad reputation over the years, primarily because the few making them tend to favor moralistic kitsch. (See: The films of Kirk Cameron.) "Fill the Void" was made in the Orthodox Haredi subculture of Tel Aviv. While some of the actions taken by its female lead — an 18-year-old suddenly thrust into marital strife — may seem regressive to audiences outside the faith, it's the right kind of religious film, which is to say it grapples with its issues even as it wholeheartedly embraces the faith.

Hadas Yaron plays Shira, a teenage girl whose sister has died in childbirth. Her mother doesn't want to lose touch with her grandchild. She suggests Shira pair off with her sister's brooding widower (Yiftach Klein). Neither is excited about betraying the deceased, but sparks, quiet and respectful ones, fly.

Jane Austen is the cross-reference here, particularly given the fiery emotions suppressed by ritual and tradition. It's not a film critical of the Orthodox way, but one that acknowledges how difficult it is on emotions. There's no easy resolution, and no solution that will placate everyone.

Director Rama Burshtein's characters prove more willing to play by Orthodox rules than many of its viewers would be. That makes the ending all the more of a shock. "Fill the Void" pulls a trick from "The Graduate" and "The Candidate," abruptly questioning whether everything the characters have worked to become cool with was worth it. Its heavy style mirrors characters both burdened by their faith and passionate about making things work.

A neutral take on the Troubles

IRA drama. The director of "Man on Wire" takes on a hot-button topic from the past.

Clive Owen and Andrea Riseborough sit on either side of the IRA tussle in "Shadow Dancer."
MAGNOLIA PICTURES

In the IRA saga "Shadow Dancer," rising English star Andrea Riseborough ("Oblivion") delivers what might as well be termed "The Heath Ledger Performance." Like his performance in "Brokeback Mountain," hers is completely internalized, free of emotion. It's not that she feels nothing or has no inner life, but rather, all feelings are locked inside the body. The audience is reduced to scanning her stony exterior for signs of life, fruitlessly and fascinatingly.

It's 1993, and Riseborough's character, Colette, is an Irish Republican Army member who plants a bomb in a subway station. Her plan is thwarted, and she's carted off by authorities. At that point, Mac (Clive Owen), an intense but rugged MI5 officer, finds her weak spot: She has a young son. She finds herself having to choose between losing her son and ratting out her connected family.

Director James Marsh, a part-time documentarian who made "Man on Wire" and "Project Nim," offers a cool, detached tone that's nonetheless sick with claustrophobic dread. For most of the film, there doesn't appear to be any way out for Colette, nor anyone else.

"Shadow Dancer" lets the impossibility of the situation sit for most of its length, before a more or less sudden shock twist. It's a thinking person's thriller, but it could stand to be, if not more taut, then at least more probing. The film can't help but trade in stock situations. The evolution of Colette and Mac's relationship — is it interrogation, or is it love? — breaks up the slight monotony, but it's an element from a less smart picture.

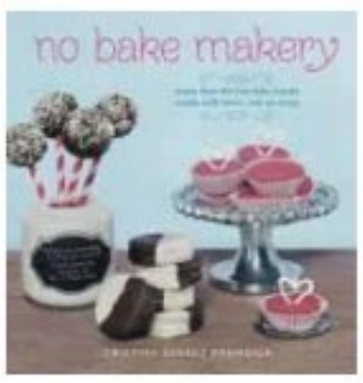
This treat takes the Retro Cake

Recipe. As the summer heat rolls in, our desire to use an oven rolls out.

Warm temps are no match for the cute and tasty two-bite treats that Cristina Suarez Krumsick, chef of No Bake Makery, creates without ever turning on an oven.

Her go-to appliance: the fridge. "You assemble the cake or pie and let the refrigerator do the work instead," she says about the recipes found in her new cookbook, "No Bake Makery: More than 80 Two-Bite Treats Made with Lovin', Not an Oven."



And avoiding a steamy apartment isn't the only perk of the no-bake experience. Krumsick's recipes don't follow strict measurements, making her treats as laid-back as your breezy summer attitude.

"With baking if you have too much of this or too much of that, you'll ruin your cake," says Krumsick. "The thing that's so great about not having to use the oven is that you can play around with ingredients and it can still turn out really great."

So go ahead, sign up for dessert duty at your next barbecue.

Ingredients

- 30 chocolate wafer cookies (Like Nabisco)
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 1 packet (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin (found in the baking section of your grocery store; try Knox brand)
- ¾ cup frozen raspberries
- ¾ cup frozen blueberries
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- 2 cups cold heavy cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

20). You may need to break some up to get them to fit just right.

3 Pour the cold water into a small bowl and sprinkle the gelatin over the water; let sit for two minutes.

4 Combine the raspberries, blueberries and sugar in a medium-heavy saucepan and cook over medium-low heat, stirring a few times, until the sugar dissolves and the mixture becomes warm to the touch.

5 Stir in the gelatin mixture. Remove from the heat and let cool to room temperature, stirring occasionally. Set aside.

6 Combine the heavy cream and vanilla in a large bowl and mix using an electric mixer until stiff peaks form, three to four minutes.

7 Gently fold in the cooled raspberry mixture, taking care not to deflate the cream.

8 Pour about half the mixture into the prepared pan and smooth it with a rubber spatula. Insert the remaining wafers into the mousse vertically (this will make your cross section look cool when you slice it later).

9 Spread the remaining mousse over the wafers and smooth with the spatula.

10 Cover with plastic wrap and freeze overnight.

11 Transfer the cake to a cutting board. Peel away the plastic wrap and slice into 1-inch squares.

Her reasoning

Everything in moderation

"I made the serving size two-bites because I think bite-size is not really enough," says Krumsick. "I'd much rather have two bites of something that's pretty indulgent than a big portion of a healthy dessert. The idea was that you can have something really indulgent, but just not too much of it."

DRAMA

'Mad Men'

What started as a slow-ish season has gotten really good, really fast. And now that "Game of Thrones" is done for the year, we need this show to ease our Sunday night blues more than ever. Tonight, Don takes a day off — likely to do some shady things.

SUNDAY, 10 P.M., AMC

AWARD SHOW

'The 2013 MuchMusic Video Awards'

Well, here's a music awards show that people respect less than MTV's. This one is Canadian! And features a performance by Canuck sweetheart Avril Lavigne, who is apparently still going with that punk rock princess thing.

SUNDAY, 9 P.M., FUSE

TRUE CRIME

'Killer Beauty'

This is the pilot episode of a new show about murders that have resulted from jealousy. And you just know most of the perps are chicks.

SERIES PREMIERE, SUNDAY, 10 P.M., BIO

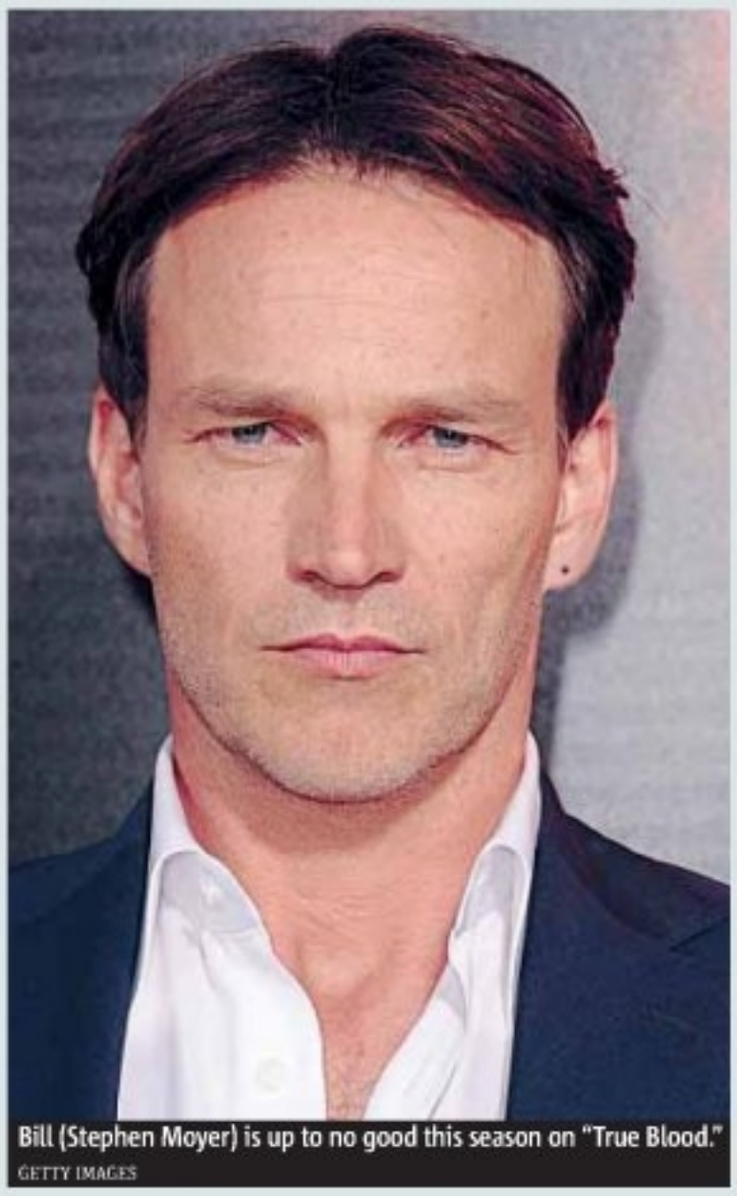
FANTASY

'True Blood'

Yesss. Sookie, Eric, Bill and company are back to bloody up our Sundays again. The sixth season opens up where last season left off — with Bill's freaky-deaky reincarnation. We are so Team Eric this season.

SEASON PREMIERE, SUNDAY, 11 P.M., HBO

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO



Bill (Stephen Moyer) is up to no good this season on "True Blood."

Eau de Honey Boo Boo

When a press release appeared in our inbox announcing that the season premiere of "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo" next month would be a "watch n' sniff" episode, we threw up in our mouths a little bit. This is a real thing, by the way — couldn't make something like this up if we wanted to. According to the release, viewers of the TLC reality show about the morbidly obese Boo Boo gang can watch the July 17 premiere while scratching and sniffing some sort of scented card that will be distributed in issues of People magazine on July 15. What could Eau de Boo Boo possibly smell like? Sweat, bacon and shame, with shades of Funions? Also, what kind of people would be into this sort of thing? The thought of even watching that show is unpleasant enough, without adding some sort of hillbilly aromatherapy to the experience. That said, we're 100 percent going to grab a copy of People next month to give this thing a hearty sniff and report back. Stay tuned.

Old man parts get a boost

Are we the only ones who find this whole "ball ironing" thing simultaneously disgusting and fascinating? For some reason, people are just now all amped up about that time, five years ago, when George Clooney joked to Esquire that he had the wrinkles in his old balls ironed out (the male equivalent of a labiaplasty — which is another disgusting and fascinating thing, by the way). Now, Salon has reported that this is an actual Thing called "tackle-tightening" and that dudes are totally into it. Are they? Are grown men into paying money to have some doctor surgically freshen up their testes? Because we're pretty sure most men we know don't give a damn about what those things down there look like.

Someone please help Farrah already

Forget Amanda Bynes — can someone out there please stage an intervention for former "Teen Mom" star Farrah Abraham? The poor girl is caught in a shame spiral of EF5 proportions. In the latest in a long and sticky string of bad life decisions, InTouch reports that Abraham has undergone her second boob job (and her fourth plastic surgery in less than three years). She is 22 years old, FYI. In other news that makes us cringe/want to adopt both her and her daughter (who is most certainly going to need extensive adult therapy one day), Abraham was just on Howard Stern's Sirius show sharing that she loved to masturbate to her own sex tape/porno "Farrah Superstar: Backdoor Teen Mom." A sex tape that co-star porn actor James Deen is purportedly not even happy to have appeared in. When even a dude who rails ladies on tape for a living is displeased to have railed you on tape, you've really taken a wrong turn somewhere in life. Luckily, TMZ reported Thursday that, according to a text convo the two had, Charlie "Tiger Blood" Sheen is totes willing to go on a date with her. Oh, we bet.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. In matters of small consequence, you're not likely to pay much attention to the details, but if something is important, the opposite will be true.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Don't be surprised if you don't grasp the essence of an idea as quickly as you usually do.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. It behooves you to be more careful concerning your possessions. Pay attention not only to where you leave them.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your friends and family will take you at your word, so think twice before speaking.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Since what you do and what you say are likely to be two different things, you could confuse people.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Don't take well-meaning friends' financial tips as gospel. Before making a major purchase or investment, be sure you know what you're getting into.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Instead of giving input on a topic that you know little about, just be a good listener.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. Be wary of anybody, even a trusted friend, trying to pry some confidential information out of you. This person's motives might be devious.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. It isn't a great idea to participate in an expensive pastime with a friend who is always reluctant to pay his or her fair share.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. If you are having trouble making an important decision, seek advice from more than one person.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Fortunately, you're prepared to work hard, because advancing your career might not be as easy as it usually is.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Someone you know has been trying to manipulate others into doing his or her work. Don't fall prey to such machinations.

Manning should get a medal

Metro's one-sided, pro-prosecution coverage of the Bradley Manning trial is a disgrace to the journalistic profession and a disservice to the American people. Manning is not a traitor but a hero for informing the American people of the atrocities committed in our name. If blowing the whistle on war crimes is "aiding the enemy," then the government has designated its own people as "the enemy."

Show a little effing respect

Re: "Kanye West does not want to hear the sound of your dumb voice" (Metro, June 12)
I am deeply offended by the lack of respect shown in Alexandra Cavallo's reference to "Jesus Effing Christ." Since when is it acceptable to so glibly and offensively refer to Jesus Christ in this manner?

Donald shines, Tiger struggles at Open

Luke Donald is the first-round leader at the U.S. Open — bonus points if you had him in your office pool. Donald carded a 4-under, par-66 to grab the interim lead since play was suspended because of darkness with many players not yet finished. Play will resume Friday at 7:11 a.m. Weather, including thunderstorms, rain and wind, suspended play twice on Day 1 before the tournament was finally stopped. Tiger Woods was struggling early and finished plus-2 through 10 holes when play was suspended. He insisted all the waiting around didn't affect him. "It's kind of the way the Tour has been this year," said Woods. "We've had a lot of bad weather this year this is the way it's been." / GETTY IMAGES

Planes, rains and a great round of golf

Golf. Phil Mickelson jumps off a red-eye flight and posts his best opening round at the U.S. Open since 1999.

Mickelson shot a 3-under, par-67 in Thursday's opening round. / GETTY IMAGES

Sleep is overrated. Ask Phil Mickelson.

Lefty took a red-eye flight from California and landed in Philly around 4 a.m. Thursday. He headed right to Merion and began his U.S. Open round at 7:11 a.m. Mickelson was seen downing an energy drink during his round.

"I might have used just a little caffeine booster at the turn, just to keep me sharp," Mickelson said, "but that was our ninth hole or so, and I just wanted to make sure I had enough energy."

Whatever the method, it worked. Mickelson went into the clubhouse at 3-under, par-67 — his best first-round score at the Open since 1999 — and a two-shot lead.

"This was as easy as this golf course is going to play," Mickelson said. "We had very little wind; there was some, but very little. We had soft fairways, soft greens and no mud balls. So we had the best opportunity to score low."

Mickelson, who had tested Merion about a week and a half ago, had flown home to watch his daughter, Amanda, graduate from eighth grade. It was one of those monumental events that he didn't want to miss. Besides, he felt like he knew the East Course already.

"I didn't feel I needed more time at Merion. What I needed was to get my game sharp, to get my touch sharp," he said.

It could have started poorly after he took three putts on his first hole, No. 11. However, Mickelson salvaged a bogey, then was forced to sit for almost 3 and a half hours due to a rain delay. He birdied 1, 7 and 9 before ending his round with a par on 10 — and Mickelson could have birdied that one if he had sunk a long putt.

The early-morning storm left the greens and fairways soft and slow. The rough was thick and nasty, especially the first cut.

"It's penalizing if you miss the fairways, very difficult if you miss the greens and it's not a given to two-putt on these greens," Mickelson said.

Analysis

'Best setup ever for U.S. Open'

Merion was tough Thursday. RIKARD LARMA

Mickelson was seen talking to USGA director Mike Davis at one point. There were nothing but compliments being thrown around. Mickelson is a big fan of Merion.

"I told him [Davis] that this is the best setup I've ever seen for a U.S. Open. I think that what I love about Merion and what they did to Merion in the setup is, they made the hard holes even harder. They moved the tees back on the more difficult holes, which made it even tougher pars. And I love that because if you're playing well, you're going to be able to make pars, and you're going to be able to separate yourself from the field by making pars."

Karma, is it a dish best served fried?

Golf. Sergio Garcia struggles in first round of Open after double bogey and quadruple bogey.

While Phil Mickelson was playing Super Dad, and Tiger Woods was barely able to get started, Day One at Merion was a struggle from the start for Sergio Garcia.

It wasn't so much the 3-over, par-73 he posted. It was the way he got there.

Garcia bogeyed his first hole, No 11, then scored a double bogey on 14 followed by a quadruple bogey on 15. He soared as high as plus-7 before coming on strong on the front nine.

"Unfortunately, two really bad holes," said Garcia, who still hasn't heard from Woods after leaving an apology note on Tiger's locker, "but I tried to battle as much as I could coming in, and was able to shoot a decent score after being 7-over through 8."

While Garcia did get some catcalls among the gallery, he insisted most of the crowd was supportive.

"I think there were a couple here and there," said Garcia, "but I felt the people were nice the whole day. That was nice to see."

Certainly nicer than all the trouble he encountered on those two fateful holes.

"At 14, I slipped and hit it out of bounds," he said.

"Then I hit a bad tee shot on the next hole and hit it out of bounds. It's just one of those things. I guess I'm just making my week a little tougher."
